

Sandra Hanson

Sandra Hanson, a retired public administrator, says on her resume, “It looks like I had a five-year attention span.” Career highlights include online coordinator/student advisor and program administrator at UALR, state coordinator for Main Street Arkansas, training manager for AR Department of Community Punishment, analyst at Gulf South Research Institute and author of the first environmental impact state for the Region __Wisconsin Department of Transportation.

Sandy took her first LifeQuest class in 2009 and claims it was love at first sight. When LifeQuest’s card making and papercrafting instructor, Ellen Barner, moved out of state Sandy choked on the prospect of Thursday mornings without card making. She has been facilitating the card making class since fall 2013.

A Wisconsin native, Sandy has her B.A. in geography from University of Wisconsin—Eau Claire where she met Jerry one evening in a darkroom (the photographic kind). He was an instructor and altered his career plans so she could finish her degree...and put him thru grad school for his Ph.D. The couple’s two sons both live in Washington, DC where they can’t tell her what they do... but they say they work in cyber security.
